Dear Marcus,

I write especially to find out if there is any possibility that you would be able to take Sansar Sharma in your department. He is finishing his PhD this year and will be looking for a job in October. He would quite like to stay with us, but I have no salary to offer.

As you may know, Sharma is basically a zoologist with considerable histological experience. Hence, he has been recording from goldfish brains, veinplants. He is very handy at this, immensely keen, hardworking and a very pleasant person. I think that to work in the States would do him a lot of good. So if you have any position vacant, please let me know. If not, perhaps you could give your advice on the most likely place for him to try. Obviously, he is most interested in the regeneration-development side of things.

Best regards to Krishna -
